

Investing in action, paying for inaction

From climate and biodiversity crisis to nature-friendly offshore wind and grids

Date: Wednesday 22 April 2026, 13:20 – 15:20

Networking Lunch: from 12:30 – 13:20

Location: Colón, Level 2, Conference Area (IFEMA North Convention Center), Madrid

Open to: invitation only

The consequences of failing to address climate change and biodiversity loss carry alarming economic costs, increasingly borne by public budgets and societies that depend on ecosystem services.

This workshop aims to explore how offshore wind – a key pillar of Europe’s energy transition and the fight against climate change and associated biodiversity loss – can help mitigate these costs, and what it takes to ensure that it is compatible with marine ecosystem protection, financially viable, and supported by measurable environmental outcomes.

Perspectives from banks, institutions, wind developers, TSOs and NGOs across the North Sea, Baltic Sea, and Mediterranean regions will be brought together, addressing financial, policy, planning and technological dimensions.
